Colorado Horsecare Foodbank, a 501(c)3 non-profit, specializes in raising money to purchase and stockpile hay to feed Colorado's horses. CHF provides emergency hay to Colorado horse owners who are struggling to get back on their feet after fires, floods, or financial problems. Emergency hay from Colorado Horsecare Foodbank provides a needed safety net that keeps horses with their families, rather than sending them away forever because of a temporary financial problem. In 2013, Colorado Horsecare Foodbank distributed more than 300 tons of emergency hay to Colorado horses, including 200 tons for northern Colorado families after the September 2013 floods; 85 tons of hay for horse owners recovering from the Black Forest fire in June 2013; and additional hay disbursements to families dealing with financial crises throughout the year. From the North Dakota Department of Agriculture: Hotline available for ranchers affected by drought-Agriculture Commissioner Doug Goehring has announced a new hotline available for ranchers affected by the drought. "Ranchers who need hay, or those with hay to sell or with pasture or hayland to rent should call us at (701) 425-8454," Goehring said. "We are also appealing to individuals who are available to move hay to contact the hotline." Individuals who contact the hotline will provide their name, contact information and what they need or can provide. They will then be entered into the Drought Hotline database to be matched up with other individuals. Goehring said North Dakota Department of Agriculture employees will answer calls to the hotline weekdays from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Callers can also leave a message on evenings and weekends. The service is free of charge.
